we came from diverse places and varied backgrounds. each of us had his own expectations of what he would accomplish during the college years. many came to yeshiva to discover the meaning of their heritage; others hoped to combine intensive jewish studies with a college education. some weren't really sure why they had chosen y.u. yet despite this great diversity, during the past 4 years we all have had one thing in common — our shared experiences as part of the yeshiva community. the bonds of friendship which have developed from this sense of kinship overshadow any differences in beliefs, attitudes, or goals that exist among us. it is these experiences and relationships that we take with us as we leave yeshiva.

friendship needs a certain parallelism of life,
a community of thought, a rivalry of aim.

— henry adams

attending one institution for 4 years will have an effect on most individuals; experiencing yeshiva for 4 years has a profound influence on all of us. yeshiva has provided us with more than just an education — it has helped shape our lives. in many instances yeshiva did not live up to our expectations. but in the final analysis, the meaning the yeshiva experience was exactly what each of us made of it. whether we like it or not, our future developement will be the product of our successes and failures and these past years.

i am part of all that i have met yet all experience is an arch wherethro' gleams that unravell'd world whose margin fades for ever and for ever when i move.
— tennyson

a reverance for learning, devotion to justice, concern for humanity ... these are the bonds that externally unite us as jews.

—albert einstein

one of the most puzzling aspects about the yeshiva experience is that even after attending this institution for 4 years, one can't ascertain what it really stands for. sure, we're all familiar with the p.r. image of yeshiva university. "american jewry's foremost institution of higher education," or "get the best of both worlds at yeshiva university." but somehow this madison ave. approach never seemed compatible with the washington heights reality.

then there is the conceptual ideal of yeshiva university — providing leadership in the development of the educational, spiritual, and cultural life of the american jewish community. under the leadership of dr. belkin, this goal has been realized via a university-wide development and expansion program. however, many students have begun to ask: what price must we pay to be a "national center of higher learning." is it really necessary to squander millions on a law school when the quality of education at yeshiva college is declining? there are no easy answers to these questions. hopefully, yeshiva will develop a philosophy that will enable it to balance the educational and spiritual needs of its students with the cultural needs of the jewish community.

build thee more stately mansions, my soul,
as the swift seasons roll!
leave thy low-vaulted past!
let each new temple, nobler than the last,
shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
till thou at length art free, leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

— oliver wendell holmes

life at yeshiva is filled with conceptual conflicts and dilemmas. This is typefied by the very name "yeshiva college". can one institution be both a yeshiva and a college? thus the yeshiva experience is permeated with the tension between torah and madah. a student is not only required to combine an intensive jewish studies program with a bulk load of college courses but is also expected to synthesize what he learns. students who succeeded on organizing their work properly and utilizing available time wisely attained the synthesis. it is they who derived the maximum benefit from the yeshiva experience.

oh, but a man's reach shall exceed his grasp,
or what's a heaven for?

—robert browning

for the average student, however, the concept of synthesis was just a pious dream. with only 24 hours a day, one couldn't devote himself fully to a double program and still have time left over to eat and sleep. students were therefore forced to establish a set of priorities. though some stressed judaic studies at the expense of their college courses, most individuals succumbed to the pressures of getting into graduate or professional school. before major exams, a student would rationalize that success in his future career compelled him to cut jewish studies courses. this rationalization took many shapes — from cutting a rabbi's shiur to stabbing a classmate in the back. the system not only tolerated but also encouraged these attitudes. the absence of proper spiritual and educational guidance contributed to an atmosphere of aimlessness. as a result, the once exalted ideal of a synthesis of torah and madah was, in reality, meaningless.

exalted ideas of fancy require to be clothed in a suitable vesture of phrase.

—aristophanes

a senseless school, where we must give our lives that we may learn to live!
a dolt is he who memorizes lessons that leave no time for prayer.
— thomas hardy

a basic dilemma facing the yeshiva student was deciding where he should direct his energies. in addition to the problem of apportioning time to both talmud torah and college courses, a student was faced with a myriad of extracurricular and community activities. one group of students, known as "joes" isolated themselves from everything but the academic experience. they dedicated their entire being to studying so as to be able to get into a good law or med school. it was truly a rare occurrence for a joe to lift his nose from books so as to involve himself in any extracurricular activity.

indifference, clad in wisdom's guise, all fortitude of mind supplies.
— jonathan swift

at the other extreme were those students who didn't take college very seriously. for the "jocks", the primary aspect of the college experience was the opportunity to "shoot the hoops" or take part in wrestling intramurals. a more idealistic set of students manned posts in various youth organizations. whether under the auspices of dirshu, seminar, or n.c.s.y., yeshiva students would travel throughout the country rekindling the fire of yiddishkeit. some became so involved in the cause of saving the world that college became merely a part-time endeavor. there are no easy solutions to the many conflicts and dilemmas inherent in yeshiva life.

one of yeshiva's strong, or weak points, (depending on whom you ask) is its religious divisions. commonly known as riets, emc, and jss, each division has a purpose and ''derech'' of its own. riets is the ''yeshivish'' program, where students learn gemorah till three in the afternoon. even within this religious division there are subdivisions. riets contains many types of bochurim, identifiable by religious outlook, attitude and appearance. many talmidim are extremely serious about limudei kodesh and emerge with a ''veldt'' of torah knowledge. (and sometimes even semicha). there are talmidim who take full advantage of excellent rebbeim, many of whom are young yu graduates and relate well to the yu student. at night, the beit medrash is full, probably more so than during the day. bochrim who go through riets have the opportunity to receive the finest education in limudei kodesh.

however, there are some talmidim of riets who are proficient in only one ''tractate''. ....

tractate joe med

mishnah:

from when must one be at morning seder? rav charlop says nine o-clock sharp. the attendance monitor is maykill, till 9:15. mosolo allows, bishas hadchak, till 9:30. others say one has till 8 hours after retiring, provided that one was studying for orgo. if one was busting for the boards, some even say, till 10 hours. a senior, even at 11:15, will not sign the late sheet.

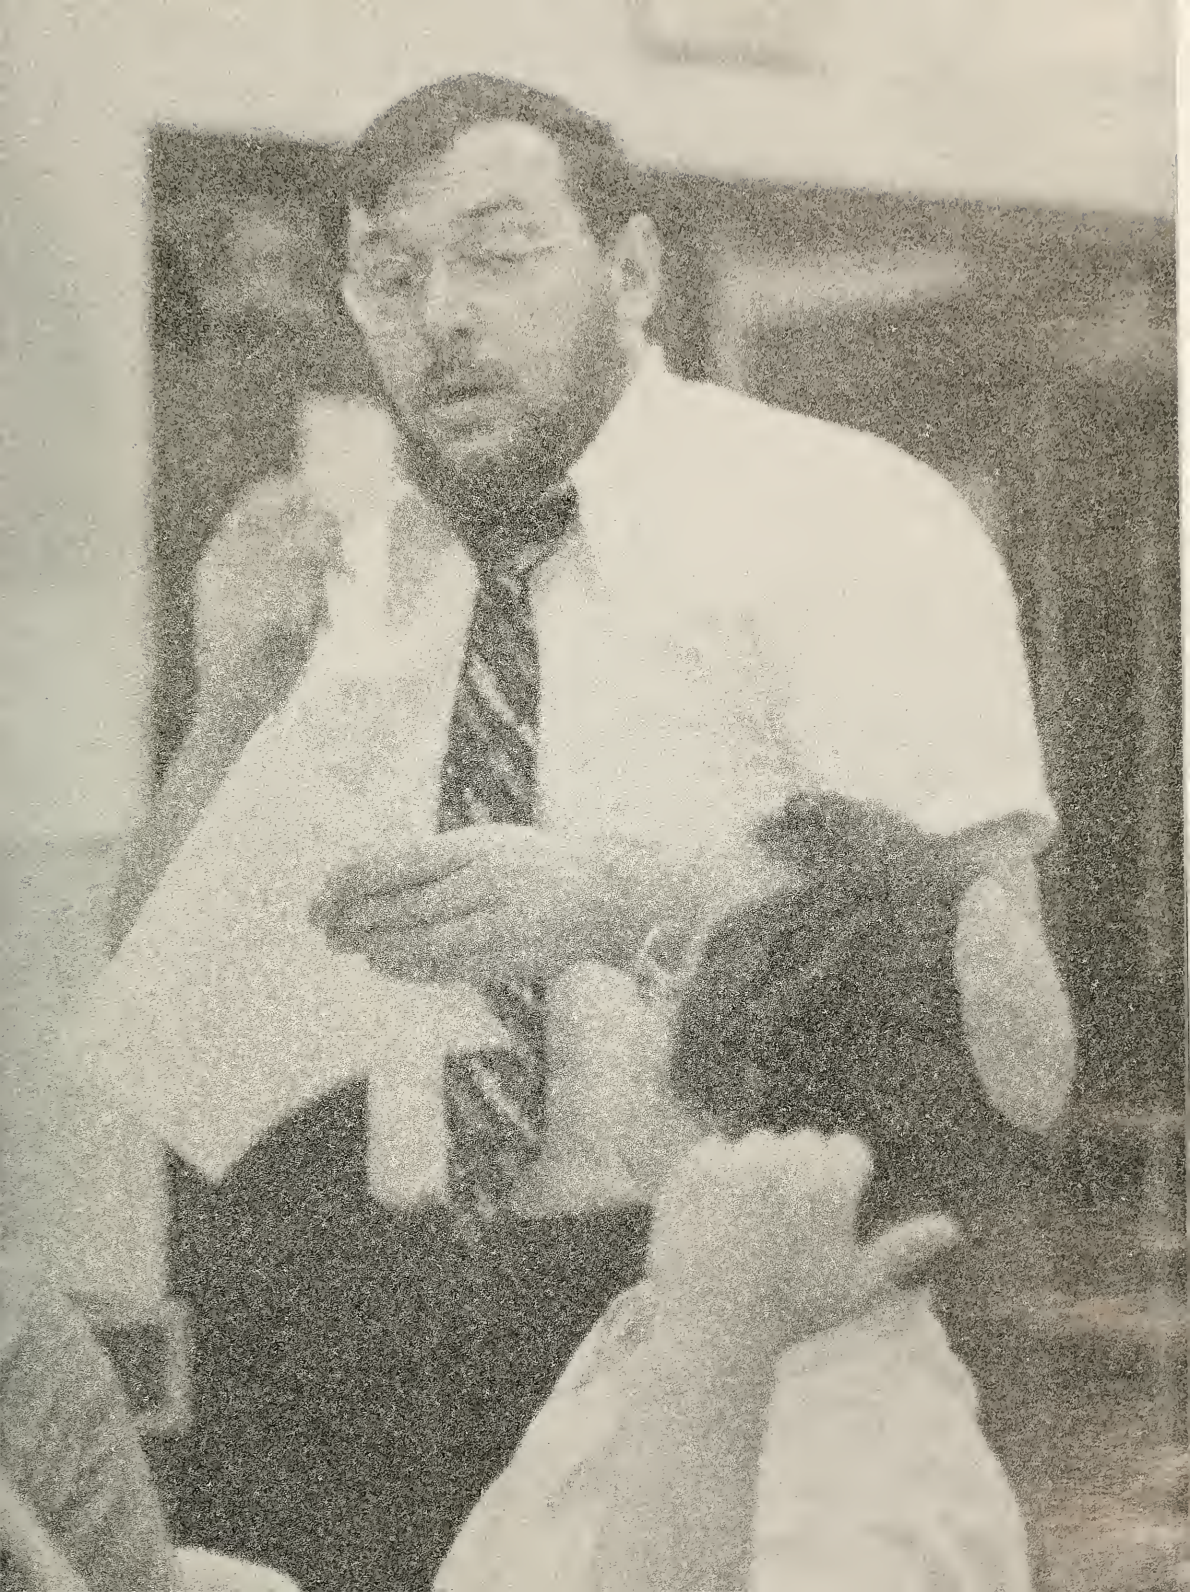
from where do we know there is a morning seder? rav charlop says it is "helacha l'mosolo mimolly" and must be strictly adhered to. rav arnest says "i did not know there was a morning seder". most bachurey heyeshiva agree, there is no seder in the yeshiva. acher says: i agree that there is a seder, but some cannot come because they are occupied with applications and kaplans. what is the penalty for not coming? rav kaplan rules. There is nothing wrong with not going to seder if you are confronted with boards. does it not say (pre-med handbook, 55B) "One who is occupied with the boards, is potur from all else"? who is a true joe? rav doc says: one who will not sleep, eat, or talk, but will engage only in orgo. some say he must not even breath. most agree, "there are no true joes left in the land."

morning seder: actually the only seder, since there is no afternoon or evening seder. rav charlop: director of riets and short hand champion of the bronx. attendance monitor: checks on your coming to the b'm. pays to get him on your side. 9:15 this refers to "sha'os kaplanios" not to the 60 minute hour. the amount of hours spent on kaplans the week before the boards is multiplied by the hours spent on bio and divided by the minutes spent learning and multiplied by ½ the letters rav charlop sent to your parents. halacha l'mosolo mimolly: these ordinances are most severe in form and it has been ruled that they cannot be questioned, even by rav charlop. rav arnest: some say there was another part to his statement — "i did not know there was a morning seder and, halvai, there should be no shiur today either". however it is generally agreed upon that, because of certain magayfos in his shiur, rav arnest became extremely erratic and many of his sayings have been discounted. he suffered from hallucinations and one even stated that he saw talmidim "taking off and letting out" in shiur. mosolo: not a tana, amora, rishon, or achron, just a bimmy. orgo: commonly known as the yetzer hara. molly: rosh yeshiva of riets. senior: not related to the term semicha as referred to in maseches "bums" (21b) "a senior, if he come to shiur twice a week is a tsadik. if he is in rav arnest's shiur, he is a tsadik if he just keeps his clothes on". acher: lit. something else. together with rav shmuel: the disciple of rav arnest. he exposed many talents in class, and went to great lengths to please his rebbi, although, because of his undue modesty, he denies it. kaplans: rival mokom limud. it generally takes away 30—40 students a year from riets, for periods of two to three months. its rosh yeshiva, rav kaplan, was put in cherem by many authorities, but it was lifted when everyone started getting sick, and there was no one to cure them. joe: a talmid of rav kaplan. rav charlop disdains them but they disregard him and follow their own teachings. concerning morning seder, (maseches bums 74b) "a cut at 9:00 saves time (and adds 15 points to the boards)" no true joes: many however have tried. a joe gohmur is someone who reaches the highest pinnacle of joedaism. may we be zoche to see the coming of joe moshiac with his 800 boards. amen.



the attitude of the student body concerning the academic program is as varied as the quality of the program itself. many students take their studies very seriously, and for good reason. the rewards are obvious:

hard students are commonly troubled by gouts, catarrhes, rheums, cachexia, bradypepsia, bad eyes, stone, and collick, crudities, oppilations, vertigo, winds, consumptions, and all such diseases as come by overmuch sitting, they are most part lean, dry, ill-colored, spend their fortunes, lose their wits, and many times their lives, and all through immoderate pains and extraordinary studies.
—robert burton

unfortunately, not all students are as dedicated. it is easy, in many cases, to see why. for example, it is difficult to get overly excited or educationally stimulated about a university department that boasts of a chairman, a senior professor and faculty all rolled into one, and not a very good one either.

many students reacted by developing a hardened cynicism about education. others, in order to save their sanity, simply decided to stay away from class as much as possible.

grades are a problem at yeshiva everyone wants high marks, and just about everyone gets them. a 4.0 index means you now rank first in your class along with about 20% of your classmates. a couple of b's and you're in the bottom half.

gone the cry of "forward, forward"

— tennyson

the shortcomings of yeshiva should not be allowed to overshadow its many good sides, sides which are often overlooked. certain departments are excellent in every respect. many classes consist of no more three or four students, allowing for some very personalized education.

throughout the term, each student followed his own path. however, as the term came to an end, the forks in the road always converged toward that ultimate period-finals. suddenly, there were no more joes or jocks, only sweating, trembling students.

many run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.
— daniel 12:4

during finals no one eats, sleeps or talks. life is reduced to one big book, always present, always a part of our consciousness and subconsciousness.

revelations are frequent during final week. who would have dreamt that joe basketball could actually read? who would have believed that F024 minnesota fats actually knew where the library was located. studying is only one weapon against finals. there are, hopefully others.

though the faculty rarely demanded anything more than regurgitation of facts, it was mainly student attitudes which produced the anti-intellectual atmosphere at Yeshiva College. Most students simply weren't interested in a liberal arts education; they had come to college to acquire pre-professional training. if one's objective was to get into a good graduate or professional school, then the ultimate goal of the college mission became piling up as many ''aces'' as possible. students simply assumed that it was impossible to get both good grades and a good education. in dealing with this supposed conflict between a liberal arts education and pre-professional training, a majority of individuals inevitably decided to devote their entire being to getting into graduate or professional school. in the process, they sacrificed not only the essence of the college experience but also an integral part of their personal developement.

''that shadow my likeness that goes to and fro seeking a livelihood, chattering, chaffering;
how often i find myself standing and looking at where it flits.''

liberal education, viewed in itself, is simply the culturation of intellect as such, and its object is nothing more or less than intellectual excellence.
— john henry newman

college is supposedly an educational experience. ideally, a liberal arts education should provide an individual with the knowledge and skills necessary to become a useful member of society. the educational process at yeshiva college left much to be desired in terms of reaching this ideal. most courses involved nothing more than an endless flow of facts from the instructor to the students. all that was needed to excel was the ability to memorize; critical analysis and original thought were often unsolicited. intellectualism was a phenomenon that was virtually non-existent. few students engaged in outside reading or in observing and learning from the world around them. for the most part, knowledge was confined to formal lectures and the assignments found in a printed syllabus.

what we call education and culture is for the most part nothing but the substitution of reading for experience, of literature for life,..... of absolute fiction for contemporary experience.
—george bernard shaw

to be a moral man is to obey the traditional maxims of your community without hesitation or discussion.

—charles s. pierce

the clash of differing religious beliefs often marked the yeshiva scene. an ongoing battle existed between the ''frummie'' and the ''secularists''. the frummies were the guardians of the values of a traditional yeshiva. they made certain that unyeshivish activities, such as beer blasts, never got off the ground. the secularists, on the other hand, maintained a more liberal religious outlook and thus promoted such social activities as blind-date parties. the two groups tended to tolerate each other and their differences did prompt many religious discussions, a novelty for most members of both sides. consequently, campus life at yeshiva was unequally structured. any activity sponsored by a college organization or club was always constrained by consideration: this was not just any college but yeshiva college.

it is peevish infirmity for a man to think himself so funny grounded that the contrary may not be believed.

—michel de montaigne

a large degree of an entering student's academic success is based on luck. the basic problem facing the yeshiva student is not the studying or hard work. it is simply: will joe freshie be lucky enough to get the "key" teachers, thereby enabling him to "ace out" and get into einstein with a 3.9: or will he meet disaster at the outset of his educational journey, and get ambushed with the killer professors? the most important aspect of orientation is that it enables the entering freshman to speak to sagacious seniors who give the straight facts about certain teachers.

of course, we always managed to get the wrong english comp teacher or the bad news hebrew lit. professor while the other guy always ends up with the y.u. grad, a real fella.

there are, on the other hand, scores of professors at y.u. who will gladly answer a question out of context, or spend a few minutes after class with a student.

it is impossible to come to an overall conclusion as to the general quality of yeshiva's education. the range of teaching ability is as wide as the university budget gap. while certain departments are known for their general excellence, others do not deserve a place in the yeshiva university catalogue. it is hard to imagine more energy devoted by a teacher than that on the part of a certain speech department professor who spends nights at y.u. perfecting the dramatics society presentations. it is also very difficult to conceive of a more "relaxing" class than that given by a certain english professor.

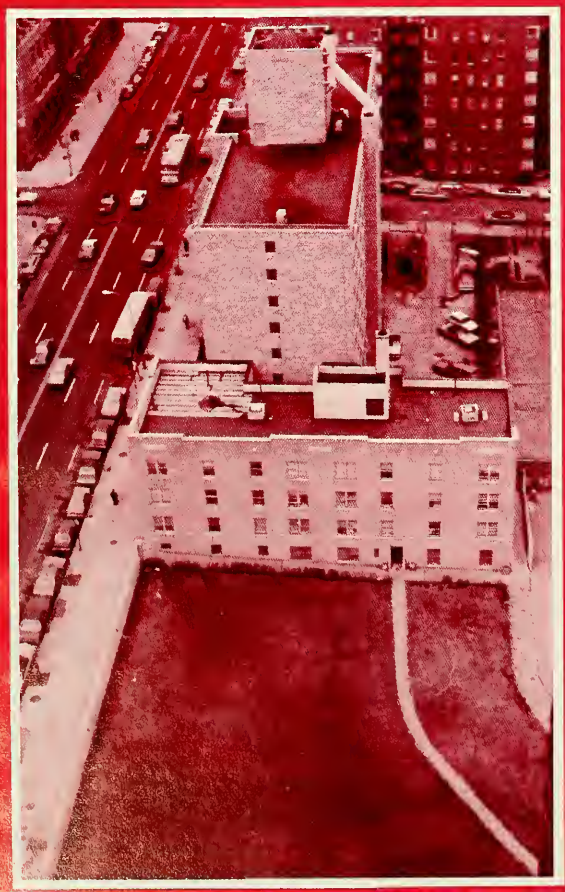
dorm life

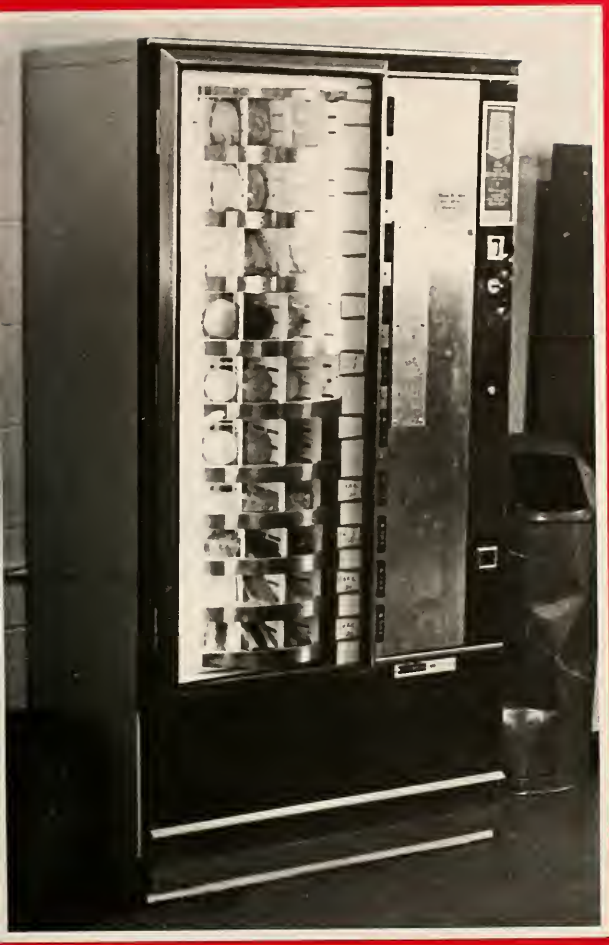
"lay aside the best book whenever you can go into the best company; and depend upon it, you change for the better."

lord chesterfield

one aspect of yeshiva university which cannot be measured by academic standards of dorm life. it is definitely an education in itself call it the art of survival.

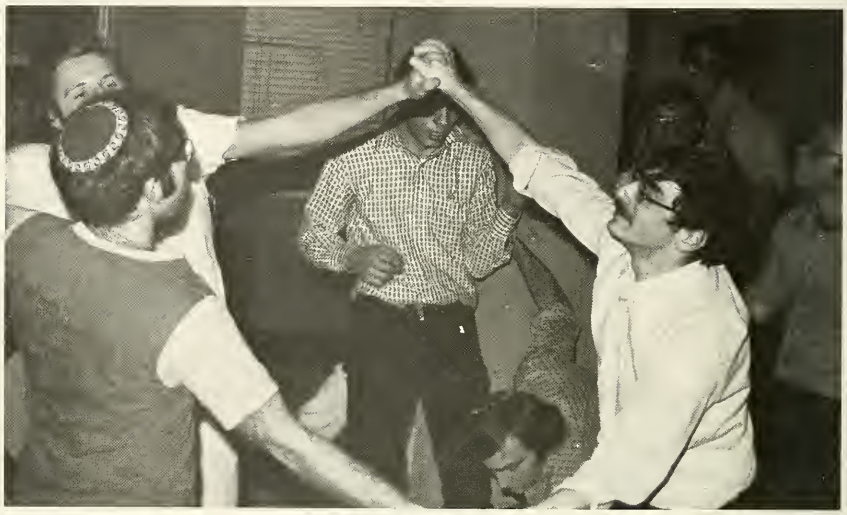
both morg and rubin dormitories have their high spots while it is true that the walls in rubin are decidedly thin, it is not true that someone on the seventh floor can answer amen to a second floor resident's blessing — they both have to be on the same floor for that to work. the hot and cold water situation is just that — hot and cold. the fact that wind gusts over 15 m.p.h. tend to shatter the rubin windows also makes life interesting for rubin residents.





morg, of course, is the luxury dorm. if a student can acquire a second floor room, he is key. if he gets a suite, he's either "super key" or the roomate of the student council president. the rooms in morg are larger, the heat hotter and the johns safer. the t.v. room and floor lounges are fine for t.v. or lounging.

morg, however, also has its unique problems. the beds do not move, are mostly wooden boards, and the matresses are covered by a sticky plastic that clings to your skin and makes you sweat. the food machines are hardly ever full, and when they are full, they're usually broken. morg residents have developed nervous twitches in their necks from constantly looking up in fear of flying water bombs.



however these hazards cannot outweigh the main lesson learnt from dorm life — that of developing lasting relationships and relating to different background and personality. maish weinstein from borough park and torah vodaath, and warren burke XVII from a denver day school and ncsy, soon become just a couple of yu roommates, and the best of friends. quite possibly, this is one of the most important accomplishments a student can hope for at yu.

"hand grasps at hand,
eye lights eye in good friendship,
and great hearts expand,
and grow one in the sense of this world's life."

robert browning

there are aspects of yeshiva life which can only be experienced as a dorm resident. wyur can only be heard from a dorm room if the transmitter is not broken. it's much easier to get a stern girl's number in the dorm. — just jot down any number found in a dorm phone booth. there's not greater thrill than walking into a darkened morg lounge and being surprised by an engagement celebration and having a bottle of champagne poured over your head. (so what if you're not the chasan).

of course, if a student wants to get any serious studying done, or wants to get to sleep before 3:00 a.m., he'd be better off staying home. card games, jam sessions can be heard till the wee hours of the morning. but the most important aspect is the bond of friendship that is formed in the course of the four year residency at a yeshiva dormitory.

"keep thy friend

shakespeare

"measure not dispatch by the times of sitting, but by the advancement of business."

one of the most unsettling aspects of the yeshiva experience was dealing with the administration. upon entering yeshiva college, one immediately comes into contact with the bureaucratic quagmire of the registrar's office. the registrar's office specializes in producing red tape and endless forms. during 4 years, virtually every student has had the opportunity to encounter the full range of imaginable mishaps — incorrect class—admit cards, erroneous computer printouts, fouled-up transcripts requests, and on and on. these difficulties are compounded by the uncooperative nature of many of the secretaries. indeed it is difficult to understand how rabbi edelstein, who always goes out of his way to assist students, was ever hired for a position in the registrar's office. his demeanor is totally incongruous with the lack of concern displayed by other personnel. the state of affairs in the registrar's office is symbolized by the construction of a wall partitioning students from office personnel.

"before i built a wall,
i'd ask to know,
what i was walling in,
or walling out."

the average student has little association with the dean's office. those students who require the dean's approval for anything usually dealt with that all-knowing administrative assistant, mrs. epstein. though few students had much contact with dr. bacon, everyone knew a great deal about him. there was universal disdain for both the dean's occasional sneakiness and for his constant,unyielding adherence to regulations, some students even gained the impression that the only word in the dean's vocabulary was "no!" yet there were times when dr. bacon actually did serve the student's interests. despite these instances, the dean's image as an arch-villain prevails.

"wronged shall be live, insulted o'er, oppressed, who dares be less a villain than the rest."
john wilmot

because of the intense pressure at yeshiva, students are forced to indulge in unique forms of relaxation. most imfamous among these is room 024, which is better known as jack schachnow's vice parlor. in addition to the pool tables, the numerous games of skill and chance provide thrills and adventure while gobbling up your quarters, a more conventional form of recreation is found in morg lounge. for those who find ping-pong dull, there is always the color t.v. the most exciting part of that activity was watching the fights develope over what to watch — the rangers, the knicks, or m*a*s,h*. those students who find t.v. unintellectual participate in a more advanced form of letting off steam-the water fight.

"to be able to fill leisure intelligently bertrand russel

"what is food for one man is bitter poison

—lucretius

there are certain everyday occurrences that manage to spice up the yeshiva experience. the various culinary concerns provide this service. if a person wanted to eat at the greasy spoon, an appropriately named luncheonette, he had to pay an arm and a leg for a meal. parker's cafeteria was much more reasonable, especially if you could stomach the specials. but a relationship developed — as prices went up, the size of portions went down. for the more adventurous individual, there was always chopsie's and mc dovids. those of us at yeshiva know that it was chopsie, not the arabs, who originated the oil crisis. after draining a slice of pizza, one could get started in the oil business. for the students with gourmet tastes, mc dovid's was the place where the delectable greaseburgers and cold pieces of chicken were served with that special touch — thrown at you.

"let them stew in their own grease."

"every library should try to be complete on something, if it were only in the history of penholes."
—oliver wendell holmes

the hectic atmosphere at yeshiva affects not only the life-styles of many students but also the functioning of various institutions. take the library. for example, for most of the semester the library rarely serves as a place of study or meditation; rather the library is merely utilized as a spot to relax between classes. however, when reading week arrives, the situation changes dramatically. students strive to catch up on all the outside readings they had neglected. some carry the additional burden of endeavoring to piece together a last-minute term-paper. the frenzied state of affairs reaches its peak when a student has to frantically search for a good set of class notes. it is at this point that the library facilities really come in handy. for the yeshiva student, it is not the volumes of books which prove valuable but rather the photostat machines.

"the richest minds need not large libraries."
—amos bronson alcott

there is no education like experience.

outside of their dorm rooms, the classroom was the only place many students could be found. the daily schedule for these students was always the same. study, study, study-and sometimes sleep and eat. there was no thought of involvement in school or outside activities, after all, there was that orgo test on friday, that bio quiz on wednesday, and the boards were only 2½ years away. once in a while these students might pick up a commentator and find out about the latest senate resolution, but that was it.

these students, happily enough, were offset by those who took full advantage of the wide range of extracurricular activities offered them. these students would be found awake at four in the morning — not studying for finals but collecting copy for commie and hamevaser. the degree of involvement in outside activities at times overstepped the bounds of sanity. one station manager of wyur would never turn off his radio, and would only go to sleep after the station signed off. (3:00 a.m.) providing that the static had sounded good. one editor of masmid would spend nights sleeping in the yearbook office and would go weeks without touching food or water (or soap).

many students involved themselves not only in school affairs, but in the affairs of the world around them. techiya and dirshu were founded and organized basically by yeshiva kids. rallies for israel and soviet jewry were initiated and attended to a large degree by yeshiva students. students gave up terms of college to work and study in israel during the trying times of the yom kippur war. many students felt that a large portion of their education was attained not in the classroom, but through a radio broadcast, a governing board meeting or a soviet jewry rally.

"though varying wishes, hopes, and fears fever'd the progress of these years, yet now, days, weeks, and months but seem the recollection of a dream."
—sir walter scott

some will retain just a recollection of the years at yeshiva — reminiscences of learning about judaism and its values or acquiring an understanding of new fields of knowledge. but if yeshiva has been successful, then more than just memories must remain with us. whatever our occupation, we can find time to devote to studying torah and to maintaining an awareness of the world around us. in this manner, the yeshiva experience will endure as a vibrant part of each of us.

"where is the heart that doth not keep within its innermost core, some fond remembrance hidden deep of things that are no more?"
—ellen c. howarth

"yesterday's dreams are tomorrow's sighs."
—the moody blues

the college years are a time of both accomplishment and frustration. whether to our benefit or detriment, the yeshiva experience has become a part of us. we have become accustomed to the unique attitudes and conditions which prevail at yeshiva. for most of us however, the future lies outside of the strict confines of yeshiva. hopefully, these past four years will have prepared us to enter a society not of our own making.

"what's past is prologue."

and cheer my mind in sorrow."

(trans. —my 2nd graduation speech)

1) yes i've been this way before—four years and a million changes ago.
and what have i learned?
i've learned to think—
but no—my thought bears no resemblance to what i've seen in the pages of descartes and hegel—i found thought were the beggars sit—in seeing life through their tears and wondering about the fate of men.
and yes—i've learned to love my g-d—but no—not as a friend treasures anothers advice—rather as a servant.
but no—
not to blind myself with the rules i've inherited—no—i'll grab my own torch and i'll light the halls of my dungeon till i have created my own castle of majesty from within.

2) my teachers have taught me one lesson—
the importance of living my life.
and so i'll not march this time around—let the wise men and the fools listen to boring speeches about what the future may be assumed to hold.
i'll be on the streets—
where the beggars sit lonely and where the dungeons could be fading living . . . . . .

better world.
mrs. g. r. weiner

amid all the joes and jocks, there were several beings who not only survived but actually conquered this university and even added a new dimension in language to its hallowed halls. there were myrons and there were freds, but asher will still stand out as a shining light to pre-meds. among schnitz, all the fellas know that geri is key as long as you like peanut butter and jelly. for eileen, the fellas were not too mature, but stan proved enough of a lure. while singing lai lai, he was constantly looking forward to lai-dah.

but we beings accept all into our ranks; in many cases even the bush are allowed. after all, what would one think of a being who, in a high-pitched voice, is constantly calling "hello big b!"? elliot may have been a grub, but what can you expect from a guy who is constantly in the state of far rockaway and whose friend in hand is egbert? after all, when safeties abound, all are created equal, except when it comes to silent safeties.

for a guy who dribbles his way to the bathroom, mark deserved better than a b in his life, so he just found himself a new life in the spring semester, but. speaking of elton freaks, one cannot afford not to mention shimmy, who between quacks was a real geezeh, alias galpmuch, and supplied the fellas with cold cuts. in our constant striving to find the beegest, the beegest..., down the yellow brick road we moved, and we really left our mark in terms of epee, bozo, ibid — we may have actually been the power base of the student body. no one will forget larry, who is everybody's FRIEND. as twinkletoes, he laughed a lot, dazzled the cameras with the smile, and won the endurance record for med school acceptances.

and then came steve, who was constantly boimeling and zundeling around. he majored in haku-sraku in college, and not much else. he endeavored to win a record for safeties on skis, but his boots were too tight. maybe that's why he didn't function too well in the 9:00 classes.

this nostalgic look back would not be complete without mark, who is at the same time the world's most tastefully gross person as well as an expert on bushkeit. having swirled four years through water, newspaper, and feather pillow fights, he may well deserve another medal on his sleeve and perhaps another plaque in the den.

after these four years, we cannot forget dorf, big b. tzatzkalah, jellyfish, maneuvers, max and son, balls, geezeh, avi, maatin, snicky-poo, behaima, wabbit, brick, baitchim, palgoon, boomer, wings, dashing dudley and the pilot, atlanta, philly, beezhek, myron bender, putzler, jacob israel avedon, myron fredstein, mr. weber, fred, kadurim, the lickers, cybill, maude, raquel, the pepsi girl, stumbo, spred-freds the world over, and of course cherwackel.

last and certainly not least, we'd like to mention toby moguls, who is our inspiration to spacedness. yeah toby, we know — this is gonna cost us a nickel. the fellas have definitely aced this ad.

animal, moves, lee-ry, shtan, ellyutz, geezeh, boimel, & swirl. and always remember — keep those eyes peeled for the schnit at 10:00. ee-zy ... ee-zy ...

i shall be telling this with a sigh somewhere ages and ages hence:
two roads diverged in a wood, and i—i took the one less traveled by,
and that has made all the difference.
